ABOUT THE AREA

History of Kings Cross & Potts Point

Once known for its grand theatres and music halls, the area was transformed by the influx of WWII troops, returning to and visiting the nearby naval base at Garden Island.

In 1897 the intersection where the Coca-Cola billboard stands today was named Queen's Cross, in celebration of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee. This caused some confusion with Queen's Square in the city, and so was re-named Kings Cross in 1905, after King Edward VII.

Kings Cross achieved notoriety in the 1920's due to the Razor Gang wars led by rival brothel owners, Tilly Devine and Kate Leigh. The Razor Gang was aptly named, as razors became the weapon of choice after the New South Wales State Parliament passed the Pistol Licensing Act (NSW) in 1927. Severe penalties were imposed for anyone caught carrying concealed firearms and handguns.

Neighbouring suburb Potts Point also has a rich history, reflected in its grand Georgian mansions and architectural monuments. Named for Joseph Hyde Potts, the area was originally part of a land grant, owned by Alexander Macleay, who was the New South Wales Colonial Secretary from 1826 to 1837.

Kings Cross & Potts Point Today

Kings Cross, colloquially known as 'The Cross' is located a short walk, train or bus ride away from some of Sydney's most popular attractions, including Circular Quay, The Rocks, Darling Harbour and Pitt Street shopping mall.

The area has an abundance of cafes, bars, restaurants and nightclubs, all within walking distance. You'll find a great range of trendy restaurants on Victoria Street and Macleay Street, or head to Darlinghurst Road and Bayswater Road for late night bars and nightclubs.

As well as numerous dining options, Macleay Street has plenty of clothing boutiques, homewares shops and specialty stores.

Above the intersection of William Street and Darlinghurst Road is the iconic Coca-Cola billboard, usually referred to simply as the 'Coke Sign'. This sign marks the entrance to The Cross and the red-light district. The right side was erected in 1974 and the left side was a later addition, in 1990.

Located at the entrance to the Fitzroy Gardens, on the corner of Darlinghurst Road and Macleay Street is the El Alamein Memorial Fountain. The fountain was commissioned as a memorial to soldiers who died in WWII, during two battles at El Alamein, Egypt, in 1942. Since its addition in 1959, the Fountain has become a well-known landmark of Kings Cross, and often serves as a meeting point for locals and visitors alike.

At Circular Quay you'll also find the Ferry Terminal and the Museum of Contemporary Art.

Tip: Have a cocktail at Opera Bar, as the sun is setting. Then head over to the restaurants at the Overseas Passenger Terminal for views of the Opera House while dining.

The Rocks

The Rocks is one of the oldest parts of Sydney, dating back to the first settlement in 1788. With stunning heritage buildings and hidden cobblestone alleyways, The Rocks is a charming place to visit. Explore the Nurse's Walk, in-between George and Harrison Streets, and the Susannah Place Museum. Also worth a look is Cadman's Cottage, built in 1816 it is one of the oldest residential buildings in Sydney.

Tip: Head to The Rocks on a Saturday or Sunday to catch the famous Rocks Markets, or on a Friday for the Friday Foodie Markets.

Darling Harbour

If you'd like to see some Australian wildlife, head to Darling Harbour for Sydney Aquarium and Sydney Wildlife World. Here you will also find Madame Tussauds, and just over Pyrmont Bridge is the National Maritime Museum. From Darling Harbour you can also jump on a sightseeing cruise or explore the newly developed Barangaroo Reserve.

Along King Street Wharf and Cockle Bay Wharf are an array of bars, restaurants and nightclubs. For more food and entertainment options, visit The Star Casino in Pyrmont.

Cheap eats in Sydney can be found at Chinatown. Centred around the Dixon Street pedestrian mall, Chinatown is buzzing with food and shopping options. Market City, in Haymarket, contains a modern shopping centre, restaurants (including Yum Cha) and the flea market, Paddy's Markets, open from Wednesday - Sunday.

Tip: Paddy's Markets have a great range of souvenirs, discount clothing and fresh produce. Catch the train from Kings Cross to Central Station; from there it is a short walk.

Sydney Fish Market

Open from 7am everyday, the Sydney Fish Market is a popular shopping spot for locals, and becoming an increasingly popular attraction for tourists. As well offering Australia's largest variety of fresh seafood, the market features many restaurants and cafes.
